

123rd MAINTENANCE AND SUPPLY GROUP

LINEAGE

123rd Maintenance and Supply Group

123rd Maintenance Group

STATIONS

ASSIGNMENTS

COMMANDERS

LTC William Bryant, 1952

Maj Edmund Morris, 1952-1953

Maj Fox, 1953-1954

LTC William XXXXXX, 1954-1957

LTC Samuel Martin, 1957

LTC William XXXXXX, 1957-1960

Colonel Howard P. Hunt III

HONORS

Service Streamers

Campaign Streamers

Armed Forces Expeditionary Streamers

Decorations

EMBLEM

EMBLEM SIGNIFICANCE

MOTTO

NICKNAME

OPERATIONS

A 123d Air Base Group came into being from July-November with Lt Col William "Dick" Senn in command. During that time Lt Col Sam Martin took charge of the old 123d Maintenance and Supply Group but the Air Base Group was shelved again (it had existed during the 1952-53 period) and Senn resumed command of the M&S Group. As late as 1959 Kentucky and Arkansas were still disputing which state should have control of the 123d Air Base Group. Eventually, however, Maj Gen Winston P. Wilson, the chief of NGB, decided in favor of Arkansas, thus ending the discussion.

1960

On March 31 the headquarters of both the 123d Tactical Recon Group and the 123d Maintenance and Supply Group were inactivated. As of April 1 the 123d Field Maintenance Squadron was redesignated as the 123d Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Squadron (CAM), and the changes also included activation of a new unit, the 123d Armament and Electronics Maintenance Squadron. Commander of the CAM squadron was Lt Col William H. "Big Robbie" Robertson and the commander of the A&E squadron was Maj Charles B. "Little Robbie" Robertson.

March 31-April 1 1960... The 123d Tactical Reconnaissance Group and the 123d Maintenance and Supply Group were inactivated as of March 31. On April 1 the 123d Armament-Electronics Maintenance Sq was activated and the 123d Field Maintenance Sq was redesignated as the 123d Consolidated Aircraft Maintenance Sq.

Air Force Order of Battle
Created: 12 Oct 2010
Updated:

Sources