EMBLEM

EMBLEM SIGNIFICANCE

Blue and yellow are the Air Force colors. Blue alludes to the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. Yellow refers to the sun and the excellence required of Air Force personnel. The globe represents the worldwide scope of mobility. The eagle symbolizes strength and keenness of vision. The lightning flashes and olive branches refer to the unit's motto, COMMUNICATIONS FOR PEACE. The satellite reflects the high technology required of the unit in order to perform its mission

MOTTO

COMMUNICATIONS FOR PEACE

NICKNAME

OPERATIONS

To provide communications and information systems for Command and Control of Special Operations Forces worldwide, as well as respond to State emergencies as directed by the Governor.

In Jan 1959, the 280th CBCS was federally recognized as the 280th Communications Squadron (Special). The first members enlisted in the squadron in Mar 1959. In 1967, members of the 280th Communications Squadron (Special) were selected for training in response to then-President Johnson's directive to use Army and Air Guard units to maintain domestic order. Those members were appointed to Team 3 of Task Force Foxtrot, which was responsible for riot control. In Oct

1982, the unit was redesignated 280th Combat Communications Squadron.

2005 31 Aug

Eleven personnel from the 280th Combat Communications Squadron, Alabama ANG, deployed to Ocean Springs, Mississippi, to support hurricane relief efforts.

19 Sep

Twelve personnel from the 280th Combat Communications Squadron, Alabama ANG, deployed from Ocean Springs, Mississippi to Lafayette Airport, Louisiana in preparation for Tropical Storm Rita.
