EMBLEM

633rd Mission Support Squadron emblem

633rd Force Support Squadron emblem: On a disc quarterly Or and Argent, in the first a winged shield of the last, in the second a lightning flash bend sinisterwise of the first, fimbriated Sable, in the third helping hands of the first, in the fourth a bomb palewise point to base of the second, fimbriated of the third, surmounted by a wrench bend sinisterwise of the last, all within a narrow border Blue. Attached below the disc, a White scroll edged with a narrow Blue border and inscribed "633D FORCE SUPPORT SQUADRON" in Blue letters. Attached above the disc, a White scroll edged with a narrow Blue border and inscribed "WITH CONCERN FOR ALL" in Blue letters. SIGNIFICANCE: Ultramarine blue and Air Force yellow are the Air Force colors. Blue alludes to the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. Yellow refers to the sun and the excellence required of Air Force personnel. The wings symbolize those who fly and fight. The lightning bolt is indicative of the quick response of our forces which will ensure the Air Force mission of deterrence. The hands signify the helping hands of our people. The bomb and wrench represent those who maintain the aircraft and the armament. (Approved, 21 May 1990)

NICKNAME

OPERATIONS

The 633rd Air Base Wing overseeing JB Langley-Eustis, Va., reorganized its joint service logistics and services units to enhance efficiency and free-up funding to reinvest locally. "Our goal was to get more from the same and roll it back into our installation," said Jerrold Twigg, head of the 633rd ABW joint base integration office. "We can reallocate these resources into areas that provide services to our mission partners and community," he added. The realignment effects two squadrons. Langley's 633rd Force Support Squadron merged with the Army's force support division at Fort Eustis, assuming responsibility for the installations' postal and communications services on Nov. 2. Likewise, the 633rd Logistics Readiness Squadron redesignated as the 733rd LRS, and will now bring Fort Eustis' port facility and emergency services under its' unified control. "We wanted to take the best from the Air Force at Langley and the Army at Fort Eustis and bring all of JBLE's capabilities to bear," Twigg said. The 633rd ABW is responsible for the installations, while the 1st Fighter Wing controls Langley's resident flying missions. 2015
