On a disc Azure, above a wavy base Sable, an arch of four mullets Argent, two swords points up one to sinister chief and one to dexter chief blades of the last, hand guards and grips Silver Gray, in nombril a deltoid point to chief Or and of the second, all within a narrow border Black. Attached above the disc, a White scroll edged with a narrow Black border and inscribed "SUPPORT THE FORCE" in Black letters. Attached below the disc, a White scroll edged with a narrow Black border and inscribed "755TH AIR EXPEDITIONARY SQ" in Black letters. SIGNIFICANCE: Ultramarine blue and Air Force yellow are the Air Force colors. Blue alludes to the sky, the primary theater of Air Force operations. Yellow refers to the sun and the excellence required of Air Force personnel. The right unsheathed sword depicts the allied forces, especially the unit's Battlefield Airmen, status and rapid ability to project power in support of the warfighter. The left unsheathed sword represents unit support of security for the combined efforts of the United States and Coalition forces as they bring peace and stability to the region. The four stars signify the four original AES squadron. The stars underscore the unit supporting U.S. military joint services in today's combat environment. The deltoid symbolizes both the Air Force dominance of air and space and underscores the Joint Expeditionary Tasked (JET) Airmen and Individual Augmentee (IA) Airmen. The two sections of the deltoid refer to the two missions to project both the operational and tactical actions of the supported force.

5/7/2009 - BAGRAM AIRFIELD, Afghanistan Bagram Airfield officials have added four new squadrons to their growing list of units during an assumption of command ceremony here May 5. More than 1,200 joint expeditionary tasking and provincial reconstruction team Airmen deployed to more than 40 forward operating bases and camps throughout Afghanistan will now be assigned to 655th, 755th, 855th or 955th Air Expeditionary Squadrons under the 755th Air Expeditionary Group. "As our mission roles have increased, it became obvious we needed to reorganize the 755th AEG," said Col. James Reed, the 755th AEG commander, before unfurling the new unit guidons. "These squadrons will be instrumental in taking care of our Airmen working side by side with the Army, coalition forces and the Afghan people fighting terrorism in Afghanistan." Colonel Reed said the leadership, management and expertise of the new squadron commanders and staff will provide greater accountability, administrative control and support for Airmen. The four squadrons coincide with International Security Assistance Force's regions of responsibility and provide support for Airmen in more than 130 different Air Force specialty codes.

The 755th AES located at Kandahar Airfield will command approximately 300 Airmen in Regional Commands South and West.
