EMBLEM

The hand represents something of great value, and is spanning the world. The hand is used in typing messages, dialing a phone, transmitting radio signals, and in repairing communications equipment. The towers and satellite suggest the quick and modern communications systems being used around the world and in space. The lightning bolts identify the strength of the signal being sent. The three stars symbolize no limit to the squadron's capabilities. They also indicate the three major elements of the 2113th the parent squadron as San Vito Air Station, Italy; the Operating Location (OL-A) at Martina Franca, Italy; and Detachment 26, at Mount Nardello, Italy. The globe represents the squadron working to protect the planet.
