OPERATIONS

The 6th Air Depot Group's mission was the supply and repair of aircraft, particularly in support of the Lend-Lease aircraft transfers. It was activated at Patterson Field in Ohio in January 1942 and arrived at Ladd on July third of that year. The group was composed of a headquarters squadron, repair squadron, and supply squadron, and had seven or eight miscellaneous attached units in areas such as ordnance, quartermaster, and signal. Together with the attached units, the 6th ADG numbered 43 officers and 850 enlisted men when it first arrived. When the Air Transport Command took control of Ladd Field in October 1943, it took over the 6th ADG as well. Six months later, in April 1944, the group was disbanded and the personnel were absorbed directly into ATC units.
