EMBLEM

EMBLEM SIGNIFICANCE

The disc, in ultramarine blue, represents the sky as a medium for communications and as the primary theater for the Air Force. The yellow band with four black crosses emphasizes the 9th Communication Squadron's ties to the 9th Reconnaissance Wing. The lightning bolts surrounding the Greek letter Sigma represents the summation of the many diverse communications systems originating from our squadron and branching out to encompass the entire wing. The red and silver signify the strength we need to accomplish the mission and our faith in our abilities to do so.

MOTTO

NICKNAME

OPERATIONS

The 9th Communications Squadron provides communications and information services and systems to customers assigned to the 9th Reconnaissance Wing, 940th Wing and associate units. The 9th CS plans and provides life-cycle management for computer network services, command and control systems, telephones, radios, and personal wireless communications systems. The unit supports the host and tenant wing's reconnaissance efforts by maintaining all air traffic control and landing systems, and air traffic control tower radios.
